

I grew up on a ranch in the wide open spaces of Texas hill country and spent a lot of time outdoors. My career as an engineer for AT&T took me all over the country, but I loved Pike County so much that I decided to stay.

I moved to Lehman Township 30 years ago, and if I had my druthers they would have closed the bridge behind me.

Many people today say the same thing: "We have to stop all this growth."

Closing the bridge behind us isn't the answer.

If our local governments do good planning we can hang onto the things that brought so many of us here: Pike County's natural beauty and scenery.

That's why I got involved in my community's planning process.

What keeps me going are the folks that I work with. It's a good group of people and we've discovered that a little bit of leadership can make a big difference.

Pike County is growing and development is going to have an impact, but we can preserve a lot of the wonderful things that we love about this place if we work at it together.
